

ERIC MENDELSON

Architect 1887-1953

Edited by Regina Stephan

With essays by Charlotte Benton, Ita Heinze-Greenberg, Kathleen James, Hans R. Morgenthaler, and Regina Stephan

THE MONACELLI PRESS

Contents

Foreword	7
Esther Mendelsohn-Joseph
Preface	7
Regina Stephan
"Why should we be laymen with respect to art?"	10
The Formative Years 1910–1918
Hans R. Morgenthaler
"Organic!"	26
Einstein, Finlay-Freundlich, Mendelsohn, and the Einstein Tower in Potsdam
Kathleen James
"Thinking from day to day, where history takes great turns, leaving hundreds of thousands unsatisfied"	38
Early Expressionist Buildings in Luckenwalde, Berlin, and Gleiwitz
Regina Stephan
"Around noon land in sight"	56
Travels to Holland, Palestine, the United States, and Russia
Ita Heinze-Greenberg
"The merchandise is primary—all architectural means serve its praise"	72
Department Stores in Berlin, Breslau, Chemnitz, Duisburg, Nuremberg, Oslo, and Stuttgart, 1924–1932
Regina Stephan
		"No stucco pastries for Potemkin and Scapa Flow"	110
		Metropolitan Architecture in Berlin: The WOGA Complex and the Universum Cinema
		Kathleen James
		"We believe in Berlin!"	120
		The Metal Workers' Union Building, the Columbushaus, and Other Office Buildings in Berlin
		Regina Stephan
		"Russia—a miracle in the past and in the present"	142
		Soviet Buildings and Projects
		Kathleen James
		"Even if the Berlin buildings had been well underway, I would have kept on fighting"	146
		Small Buildings for the Jewish Communities in Tilsit, Königsberg, and Essen
		Kathleen James
		"One of the most lovable people and at the same time one of the most unpleasant"	152
		Mendelsohn and His Assistants in the 1920s and Early 1930s
		Regina Stephan
		"The same means, the same end"	160
		Private Houses in Berlin and the Influence of Frank Lloyd Wright
		Regina Stephan

“I often fear the envy of the gods” Success, House, and Home Ita Heinze-Greenberg	170	Notes	262
		Biography	279
		Selected Bibliography	281
“We’ll leave it to the Schultzes from Naumburg to ignore the Mediterranean as the father of the international art of composition” The Mediterranean Academy Project and Mendelsohn’s Emigration Ita Heinze-Greenberg	182	Index	283
“Enough mistakes and experience behind me—enough strength and future before me” Buildings in England and the Partnership with Serge Chermayeff 1933–1941 Charlotte Benton	190
“I am a free builder” Architecture in Palestine 1934–1941 Ita Heinze-Greenberg	204
“It will be hard for us to find a home” Projects in the United States 1941–1953 Hans R. Morgenthaller	242		