

® WILEY

A John Wiley and Sons, Ltd, Publication

Contents

Acknowledgements	005
Introduction	010
1 Image in contemporary culture	014
Hegemony of the image	015
The demise of imagination	016
Image production and the feasibility of architecture	017
Architecture and the spectacle	019
Images of control and emancipation	021
The sense of the real	022
2 Language, thought and image	026
Image and language	027
The philosophical image	031
The meanings of image and imagination	032
The nature of imagination	036
3 The many faces of the image	040
The lived and embodied image	041
Images of matter	046
The multi-sensory image	050
The image as a condensation	055

The archetypal image in architecture	058
Architecture as mandala	061
The reality and unreality of the artistic image	063
The unconscious image	064
The metaphor	066
Image, affect and empathy	069
The collaged image	071
Images of incompleteness and destruction	074
Images of time	078
Illusionary image	079
The iconic image	083
The epic image	084
Poetic images as worlds	087
4 The anatomy of the poetic image	092
The dual existence of the poetic image	093
Ontological difference	097
Significance of origins	101
The lived metaphor	103
Thinking through art	106
Historicity of the mind and poetic time	108
Unity of the arts: art and life	110
Aestheticisation and beauty	113

5 The architectural image	118
Architecture and the world	119
Architecture as metaphor	120
Architecture as an organising image	121
Architecture as a verb	123
The house and the body	124
Historicity of architectural images	126
Primal architectural images and archetypes	128
The imagery of the window and the door	130
Dilution of images	132
The fragile image	132
Newness and tradition	137
Selected bibliography	140
Alphabetical index	145
Image credits	150