

Dom Hans van der Laan
Tomelilla

architectural theory in practice

Caroline Voet

in cooperation with

Rob de Carpentier and Rik van der Laan

chapter 3: disposition

- 3.0 synopsis 73
- 3.1 historical disposition of a convent 74
- 3.2 towards a disposition of architectonic space 76
- 3.3 abstract architectonic models 78
- 3.4 between inside and outside 79
 - 3.4.1 central or peripheral 80
 - 3.4.2 the embryonic shape of the peripheral disposition 81
 - 3.4.3 'formulas'for complexes: disposition of urban space 82
 - 3.4.3.1 disposition of the city in the patterns of a Scottish tartan
 - 3.4.4 peripheral disposition in the convent in Tomelilla 86
 - 3.4.5 spatial unfolding around an inner court 88
 - 3.4.6 disposition according to thematismos 92
 - 3.4.7 four convents by Dom Hans van der Laan 94
- 3.5 between solid and void: mass and space as the foundation for the house
 - 3.5.1 disposition between mass and space: nearness and spread 96
 - 3.5.2 disposition of the house: from cella to hall 98
 - 3.5.3 the cella as a model for a monastic cell 103
 - 3.5.4 the entire hall as model for the church 105
 - 3.5.5 half-spaces 107
 - 3.5.6 a specific'formula'for the library 109
 - 3.5.7 a specific 'formula' for the stairwell 111
 - 3.5.8 a specific'formula'for the lean-to 113
 - 3.5.9 the gallery as ambulatory around the courtyard 115
- 3.6 dynamic designing 116
 - 3.6.1 dynamic disposition 116
 - 3.6.2 designing in dynamic patterns 117
 - 3.6.3 tactile architecture 118
- 3.7 between open and closed: the articulation of the wall 120
 - 3.7.1 articulation as a means of expression 120
 - 3.7.2 window arrangements and column-spacings 122
 - 3.7.3 'formulas'for the walls 124
 - 3.7.3.1 the external fagades of the wings 125
 - 3.7.3.2 from central to peripheral window arrangement 126
 - 3.7.3.3 the internal walls 129
- 3.8 summary 130
 - 3.8.1 Architectonic Space, ratios at a glance 130
 - 3.8.2 consecutive measure-systems 131

chapter 4: counting and measuring

- 4.0 measure by measure 133
- 4.1 measuring and measuring out 135
- 4.2 first concept sketches for the monastery and its gardens 136
- 4.3 refining the programme 138
- 4.4 feedback on the size of the wings 139
- 4.5 feedback on the size of the terrain 140
- 4.6 between counting and measuring out through the disposition 141
- 4.7 a brochure for the nuns, the programme brief 142
- 4.8 a monastery with crypt and three levels 143
 - 4.8.1 the crypt in Tomelilla 144
 - 4.8.2 a letter from father Hans 146
- 4.9 scaling up the whole monastery by five per cent 152
- 4.10 final measure-system for Tomelilla 153
- 4.11 new plans 154
- 4.12 a two-level monastery without crypt 155
- 4.13 the monastery and its inhabitants: building, living and working in the first phase, 1990-1994 156
photo essay by Karl-Einar Ldfqvist

chapter 5: ordinance

- 5.0 creative thinking 167
- 5.1 ordinance: from concrete block to domain 168
 - 5.1.1 header and course measures 168
 - 5.1.2 an ideal domain 170
 - 5.1.3 adaptation of the domain's shape 171
 - 5.1.4 scale between domain and court 174
 - 5.1.5 scale between court and cella 175
 - 5.1.6 scale of the cella, between wall and primary space-forms 176
 - 5.1.7 between counting and measuring from the ordinance 178
- 5.2 ordinance of the wings 180
 - 5.2.1 the first rough measurement of church and wings 181
 - 5.2.2 the garden wing 182
 - 5.2.2.1 measures of the wing 183
 - 5.2.2.2 measures of the spaces, the concept of 'interior layout' 184
 - 5.2.2.3 bay-measures 185
 - 5.2.2.4 subdivision into wall-pieces 186
 - 5.2.2.5 vertical structure of the wing 188
 - 5.2.2.6 horizontal articulation of the facade 190
 - 5.2.2.7 detail of the eaves overhang 191
 - 5.2.2.8 facade studies for the garden wing: playing with the composition 192
 - 5.2.3 the individual wings 194
 - 6.2.4 the south facades and the library in the garden wing 195

- 5.2.5 the access wing and the guesthouse 196
- 5.2.6 revision of the lean-to 198
- 5.2.7 galleries surrounding two courts 200
- 5.3 the problem of the bell tower 202
 - 5.3.1 two options for the tower 204
 - 5.3.2 bells in the tower 207
- 5.4 the church 208
 - 5.4.1 Tomelilla, rhythms for the frieze and the gallery 210
 - 5.4.2 Vaals versus Tomelilla 212

chapter 6: the interior

- 6.1 the furniture 215
 - 6.1.1 characteristic design patterns 218
 - 6.1.2 furniture in the church 219
 - 6.1.3 furniture in the guestrooms 224
 - 6.1.4 list of pieces of furniture 227
- 6.2 natural stone in the church 229
 - Rudi de Bruin*
 - 6.2.1 the altar 231
 - 6.2.2 the sacrament cabinet and holy water fonts 234
- 6.3 the churchyard cross, an example from the domain 236

chapter 7: a monastery for Mariavall

- 7.1 a design by father Hans 239
- 7.2 Rik van der Laan's designs 248
- 7.3 Mariavall 'after Van der Laan' 250

epilogue 252

biographical notes

redacted by Babs Rentjes

Dom Hans van der Laan (1904-1991) 258
life and work as a monk, architect, theoretician and teacher 259
Brother Lambertus Moonen

- concise bibliography 268
- acknowledgements 270
- colophon 272