

Managing Networks in Project-Based Organisations

Stephen Pryke

University College London London

WILEY Blackwell

Contents

List of Figures xi

About the Author xiii

Preface xv

Acknowledgements xvii

- 1 Introduction 1
 - Structure of the Book 2

- 2 Theoretical Context 11
 - Management Context 11
 - Project Transitions 12
 - Project Management as Practice 12
 - Systems Theory and Networks 13
 - Transient Relationships 13
 - Dyadic Contractual Relationships and Structure 14
 - Permanent and Temporary Organising 15
 - Structure and Networks 16
 - Information Classification 16
 - Nodes and Linkages 17
 - Summary 18

- 3 Networks and Projects 21
 - Definition 22
 - Origins and History of the Concept of Social Networks and their Analysis 22
 - Problems with Projects 24
 - Actor Role Classification and Ritualistic Behaviour 25
 - Routines 26
 - Are Networks a Response to Uncertainty in Projects? 27
 - Temporary Project Systems and their Replication 28
 - Beyond the 'Iron Triangle' 28
 - Why Networks? 30
 - Individuals and Firms in Networks 32
 - Problems Associated with the Use of SNA in Project Research 32
 - Summary 33

- 4 Why Networks? 35
 - Definition 36
 - Why Choose Social Network Analysis? 36
 - Problems Associated with the Use of SNA in Project Research 37
 - Concepts and Terminology 38
 - Defining the Population for the Study 46
 - What is a Network? 46
 - Actor Characteristics 47
 - Network Characteristics 55
 - Some Final Thoughts 56
 - Conclusion 58

- 5 Self-Organising Networks in Projects 61
 - Introduction 61
 - What Do Project Clients Want? 63
 - Dangerous Assumptions 66
 - Implications if these Assumptions are Incorrect 69
 - Networks and Uncertainty 70
 - Does it Matter How We Conceptualise the Project? 70
 - Procurement Through Markets and Hierarchies; Project Design and Delivery Through Networks 71
 - Summary and Conclusions 73

- 6 Game Theory and Networks 77
 - Introduction 77
 - To Begin: Some History 78
 - What is a Game? 79
 - Key Assumptions 83
 - Benefits of Applying Game Theory to Project Networks 85
 - Other Considerations in Applying Game Theory to Project Networks 85
 - Choices About Actions and Co-Players 86
 - Nash Equilibrium 88
 - Anti-Coordination Behaviour: 'Hawk-Dove' and 'Chicken' Games 89
 - Game Theory and Information Exchange Network Formation 89
 - Game Theory and the Five Dangerous Assumptions in Projects 90
 - Summary and Conclusions 93

- 7 Network Roles and Personality Types 95
 - Network Roles 98
 - Personality Traits 104
 - Humour and Behaviour in Networks 104
 - Profiling an Ideal Project Network Actor 109
 - Specific Personality Traits 109
 - Network Roles and Personality Traits 113
 - Summary 115

- 8 Network Enabling 117
 What Do We Mean by Network Enabling? 117
 Trust 119
 Empathy 120
 Reciprocity, Favours and Psychological Contracts 123
 Implications of Violation of Psychological Contracts 124
 Generosity 126
 Characteristics of Individuals that are Destructive for Networks 128
 Narcissism 129
 Egotism 130
 Summary 131
- 9 Project Networks and Building Information Modelling 133
 BIM Origins 133
 Building Information Modelling and Information Management 134
 Information Management and Organisation Structure 135
 BIM as an Artefact 135
 Self-Organising Networks in the Context of Design 137
 BIM and Networks: A Research Agenda 139
- 10 Introduction to the Case Studies 143
 Technical Overview of Case Studies 143
 Research Funding 146
 Summary 146
- 11 Case Study 1: Communities in Self-Organising Project Networks 147
 Data Collection 148
 Data Analysis 150
 Findings 150
 Communities in Self-Organising Project Networks 152
 Summary 154
- 12 Case Study 2: Dysfunctional Prominence in Self-Organising Project Networks 157
 Data Collection 157
 Data Analysis 158
 Actor Prominence Measures 158
 Organisational Networks 160
 Summary 162
- 13 Case Study 3: Costing Networks 165
 Conceptual Framework 165
 Network Costs 166
 Data Analysis 167
 Summary 168

14 Summary and Conclusions 171

Introduction 171

Chapter Summaries 171

Conclusions 177

Appendix 181

References 183

Index 207