

Innovations in Executive Education

Wolfgang Amann, Shiban Khan,
Agata Stachowicz-Stanusch, Shiv Tripathi

Content

SECTION 1: (A) BUSINESS (SCHOOL) AS USUAL IS NOT AN OPTION	1
Chapter 1: Introduction and overview of the book	2
1.1 Section 1: (A) Business (school) as usual is not an option	2
1.2 Overview of our buffet of ideas	5
Chapter 2: Fighting the McDonald’s phenomenon	11
2.1 “In the niches there are riches,” or more of “same old same old”?	11
2.2 Yvory et al.’s typology and impact on executive education	13
2.3 Lorange’s typology and impact on executive education	16
2.4 Amann’s typology and impact on executive education	27
2.5 Conclusions	41
SECTION 2: CHANGE TRAJECTORIES.	49
Chapter 3: a humanist approach to management as an alternative to the homo oeconomicus model	50
3.1 Introduction.	50
3.2 Humanism and integrity	52
3.3 The limitations of homo oeconomicus.	54
3.4 Promoting humanist management systems by means of goal-oriented management training.	59
3.5 Concluding considerations.	69

Chapter 4: The multivoiced classroom – a storytelling
ethics approach to management education	79
4.1 Introduction	79
4.2 Storytelling ontology	80
4.3 Storytelling as an ethics of mattering	84
4.4 The classroom as a storytelling community	86
Chapter 5: The Doctor of Business Administration (DBA):
A disruptive innovation in business education?	96
5.1 Definition and background	96
5.2 DBA vs. PhD.	99
5.3 Key drivers of the DBA offering	101
5.4 Addressing business faculty shortages.	102
5.5 Meeting market requirements: The rise of the executive-scholar.	103
5.6 Develop new revenue streams	105
5.7 Partnership approach	111
5.8 Conclusions	112
Chapter 6: The emerging learning model and the rise
of experiential learning	117
6.1 The MIT-IMD model as the emerging benchmark?	117
6.2 Pleasing all learner types	118
6.3 Beware international differences	119
6.4 Three different satisfaction curves	123
6.5 Experiential learning as an art and science	128
6.6 Mix the teaching styles	140
6.7 Conclusions	144
Chapter 7: Diversifying faculty when developing leaders in transformative executive education seminars – the crucial role of external leadership coaches	146
7.1 Understanding diverse stakeholders	146
7.2 Ensuring the right mix of faculty.	148
7.3 An illustrative case study	152
7.4 Conclusions	156

Chapter 8: Shifting boundaries - The co-evolution of organizational development, business consulting, and academic education	157
8.1 Economy and society.	157
8.2 Organizational development caught between complexity and integration.	157
8.3 Business consulting caught between knowing and not-knowing	159
8.4 Universities caught between entrepreneurship and autonomy.	160
8.5 Tensions as opportunity for change.	161
8.7 ... and change as opportunity.	164

SECTION 3: REVIEWING THE PROCESS. 167

Chapter 9: Teaching versus designing experiences:
Understanding and delivering to the market	168
9.1 Introduction.	168
9.2 A brief history of management education	169
9.3 Innovation and delivery.	170
9.4 Relationship between business schools and students	171
9.5 Developing curricula for general administration rather than for specific industry focus	171
9.6 Steps to bridge the gaps	172
9.7 Conclusions	175
Chapter 10: Leadership in a crisis	177
10.1 Introduction.	177
10.2 A culture-building senior executive leadership program	177
10.3 The crisis strikes back	180

10.4	Special interventions for branch managers and client advisors	181
10.5	Creation of leadership learning bites	182
10.6	Design of an ambassador program	185
10.7	Conclusions	185
Chapter 11: OD-HRD interventions for creating a learning organization: Experiences and reflections as a change-agent . . .		188
11.1	Introduction	188
11.2	Development-cum-assessment centers	189
11.3	Image sharing	191
11.4	Diagnostics	195
11.5	Learning diary	196
11.6	Learning review	197
11.7	Action plan	197
11.8	Learning diary and action planning in the process of planned change	198
11.9	Building a model for evaluating training effectiveness	199
11.10	Conclusions	202
Chapter 12: What's it worth? - Measuring the impact of executive education		204
12.1	The impact of executive education on business results	204
12.2	The importance of management training	204
12.3	Cost-benefit analysis as a growing part of the evaluation	206
12.4	The Phillips-model for establishing the ROI of training	207
12.5	Utility analysis based on Schmidt, Hunter, and Pearlman	210
12.6	Case study - MBA program participants	212
12.7	Results of the case study	214
12.8	Does it really work? Limitations of the evaluation models	217
12.9	Conclusions	218

Chapter 13: Complexity management – all the qualification you need?.	227
13.1 Introduction.	227
13.2 Goal achievement criteria 1 – The change in mindsets	228
13.3 Goal achievement criteria 2 – Level-specific messages.	230
13.4 Goal achievement criteria 3 – Fit with skill maturity level	233
13.5 Goal achievement criteria 4 – Degree of holism of chosen approach	234
13.6 Conclusions	236
Chapter 14: Conclusions on innovations in executive education.	238
About the authors	246