3.2.1	Need for autonomy	37
3.2.2	Need for competence	38
3.2.3	Need for relatedness	39
3.2.4	Situational needs (for income, risk avoidance, and effort avoidance)	39
3.2.5	Expectancy-valence theory	40
3.2.6	The non-necessity of anything for entrepreneurial intention	41
3.3	The perceived feasibility of entrepreneurship	42
3.3.1	Entrepreneurial tasks and required abilities	43
	Opportunity recognition	43
	Viability screening	44
	Problem solving	46
	Management skills	46
3.3.2	Entrepreneurial self-efficacy	47
	Self-regulation theory	47

	Overconfidence and optimism	49
	Solo versus team entrepreneurial intention	51
3.4	Summary	52
4	Issues for entrepreneurial intention research	54
4.1	Introduction	54
4.2	Construct issues	54
4.2.1	Broad versus narrow entrepreneurial intention constructs	54
4.2.2	Latent variable versus indicator variable	56
4.3	Measurement issues	57
4.3.1	Construct clarity	57
4.3.2	Common-method bias	57
4.3.3	Espoused versus revealed data	57
4.3.4	Sex versus gender	58
4.4	Method issues	61
4.4.1	Non-representative samples	61
4.4.2	Cross-sectional versus longitudinal studies	63
4.4.3	Symmetrical correlational analysis	63
4.4.4	Asymmetrical qualitative comparative analysis	66
4.5	Summary	67
5	Commercial entrepreneurial intention	69
5.1	Introduction	69
5.2	Commercial entrepreneurial intention studies	70
5.2.1	Antecedents of commercial motivation	71
5.3	Profit-maximising versus profit-satisficing entrepreneurial intention	73
5.3.1	Profit maximisation	74
5.3.2	Profit satisfying	74
5.4	Growth-oriented versus independence-oriented entrepreneurial intentions	76
5.4.1	The hypotheses	77
5.4.2	The empirical study	79
5.4.3	The results	82
5.4.4	Subtypes of profit-satisficing commercial entrepreneurs	82
5.5	Summary	84

6	Intrapreneurial intention	86
6.1	Introduction	86
6.2	Development of hypotheses regarding intrapreneurial intention	88
6.2.1	Is intrapreneurial intention a distinct construct?	90
6.2.2	Attitudes to the outcomes of intrapreneurship	92
6.2.3	The impact of entrepreneurial self-efficacy on intrapreneurial intention	95
6.3	Sample and method	96
6.4	Analysis and results	97
6.4.1	Separate and distinct constructs?	97
6.4.2	Regression analysis	97
6.5	Discussion	99
6.6	Summary	102
7	Social entrepreneurial intention	104
7.1	Introduction	104
7.2	The "three pillars" of social entrepreneurship	105
7.2.1	The pro-social motivation of social entrepreneurs	107
7.2.2	The profit motivation of social entrepreneurs	107
7.2.3	The innovation motivation of social entrepreneurs	108
7.3	An empirical study of social entrepreneurial intention	109
7.3.1	The model	110
7.3.2	The sample and method	113
7.3.3	Regression analysis	115
7.3.4	Contrast between the different types of entrepreneurial intention	118
7.4	Summary	120
8	An inclusive model of entrepreneurial intention	122
8.1	Introduction	122
8.2	Elements of the conceptual model	126
