

CORPORATE INCOME TAXES UNDER PRESSURE

Why Reform
Is Needed and
How It Could Be Designed

EDITORS

RUUD DE MOOIJ
ALEXANDER KLEMM
VICTORIA PERRY

Table of Contents

Foreword	v
Preface	vii
Contributors	ix
PART I: INTRODUCTION AND BACKGROUND
1 Introduction Ruud de Mooij, Alexander Klemm, and Victoria Perry	1
2 Why and How to Tax Corporate Income Ruud de Mooij and Alexander Klemm	11
3 The Current International Tax Architecture: A Short Primer Narine Nersesyan	23
4 Global Firms, National Corporate Taxes: An Evolution of Incompatibility Shafik Hebous	33
PART II: PROBLEMS WITH THE CURRENT INTERNATIONAL TAX ARCHITECTURE
5 Difficulties in Determining and Enforcing Source-Based Taxes Roberto Schatan	57
6 Has Tax Competition Become Less Harmful? Shafik Hebous	87
7 Residence Based Taxation: A History and Current Issues Kiyoshi Nakayama and Victoria Perry	107
8 Are Tax Treaties Worth It for Developing Economies? Sébastien Leduc and Geerten Michiels	123
9 The Impact of Profit Shifting on Economic Activity and Tax Competition Alexander Klemm and Li Liu	175
10 Taxing the Digital Economy Aqib Aslam and Alpa Shah	189

PART III: POTENTIAL SOLUTIONS

11	Strengthening Source-Based Taxation Sebastian Beer and Geerten Michielse	227
12	Residence-Based Taxation: Is There a Way Forward? Kiyoshi Nakayama, Victoria Perry, and Alexander Klemm	253
13	Destination-Based Taxation: A Promising but Risky Destination Shafik Hebous and Alexander Klemm	265
14	Formulary Apportionment in Theory and Practice Thornton Matheson, Sebastian Beer, Maria Coelho, Li Liu, and Oana Luca	283
15	Resource-Rich Developing Countries and International Tax Reforms Thomas Baunsgaard and Dan Devlin	309
16	The Evolution of Tax Law Design within an Increasingly Destabilized International Tax Law Framework Christophe Waerzeggers, Cory Hillier, and Irving Aw	341
	Index	359